No thoroughfare.
Council meets to-night.
All's well that ends well.
Only three days more for Guiteau.
The Acme minstrel trone will play here on the 3rd and 4th.
The Adolph Obrig cleared for sea yesterday. Her cargo is worth $129,438.
A million dollar fire at Lawrence, Mass., last Sunday night destroyed the Pacific woolen mills.
San Francisco freight rates are very low. Forty-five shillings were the ruling charter figures last week.
A. McKinnis, the live insurance agent of Portland, was married to Miss Ida Gilman, in that city last evening.
The patent self-action horseshoe nail polisher, the invention of O. P. Graham, is in successful operation at Stinson's carriage shop.
A dead body, supposed to be the remains of the drowned carpenter, of the British ship Valparaiso, missing two months, was found last Saturday, in the Willamette.
John H. Randolph, who came to the coast seven years ago, is wanted. His Elmina, N. Y., aunt has died and left him $850,000. John, if living, has a heap of worry ahead of him.
On the 8th inst. Garibaldi was buried, but the S. F. Chronicle of the 17th says that he is improved in health, and took a drive to Palermo. It is simply a question of veracity between the cable and the Chronicle.
The Shubrick is off for Coos Bay and Cape Arago. Yesterday she took on an assorted cargo of general merchandise—brooms, soap, sugar, oil, flour, chicken-feed, etc., and seemed to be going into the general freighting business.
What might have been a fearful collision on the Kalama road last Thursday, was fortunately averted. When the engines were finally brought to a standstill they were not over 100 yards apart.
On Saturday last, says the Vindicator, Mr. John Bowen, road supervisor of Foster's district, Columbia county, which is just opposite Kalama, was drowned in the river at Nicholas's landing. He had been over to Kalama in a sail boat and was returning.
The California Democrats completed their state ticket last Saturday by nominating Daggett, of Siskiyou, for Lieut. governor, Ross and Sharpstein for supreme judges; J. R. Glasscock and Chas. A. Sumner for congressmen at large; J. P. Dunn for controller; W. A. January for treasurer; J. F. Thompson, state secretary; T. S. Marshall, attorney general, and W. T. Welcker state superintendent.

Singular, isn't it, how history repeats itself? Castle Garden is to be "abolished." It got out of repairs and the steamship companies wouldn't have it repaired, and the state of New York got spunky and wouldn't have it repaired "either," and so the poor immigrants will have no Castle Garden. When one of these p. i. arrives in Astoria, and wants to go to uptown how surprised he will be.
The chief engineer of the fire department of Coldwater, Michigan, is an enterprising genius. He couldn't get the boys to turn out to drill, so he hit on the happy expedient of setting fire to a dwelling house and then rushing to the conflagration to give his subordinates an example of prompt efficiency. But somehow the authorities didn't "catch on," and now he stands charged with arson.

FATAL DEVICE OF A BANK ROBBER.

$3,000 Buried in Astoria!
"I don't want you to mention my name," said a gentleman at the City Hall yesterday afternoon, "because a smallpox notoriety is not an enviable one, and it is now some years since I had much to do with the disease. I was a young man with a mania for the study of medicine, and, having no means, I was compelled to earn my living at the same time I was reading. It occurred to me that if I could get a clerkship at one of the hospitals I might study to much advantage and watch the course of disease as well as assist in surgical operations. I got a job at Bellevue Hospital, New York, and worked as an orderly or nurse. Then smallpox became very prevalent, and I was sent down to the smallpox hospital at the end of Blackwell's island. Among the patients was one man who had the worst case I ever saw. It was frightful to see him and hear him rave. When he began to recover I paid him a good deal of attention, and we became quite friendly. There was an air of mystery about the man which rather puzzled me, but as he did not tell me much about his affairs I did not ask him to enlighten me. One day he took very sick and grew rapidly worse. I sat by his bedside by the hour, but he made up his mind that his time had come, and he was very uneasy. I was about to go off watch in the evening when he motioned for me to bend over him. He grasped my hand in both his own: 'Promise not to divulge what I am about to tell you until after I am dead.' 'I promise.' 'Swear,' said he, faintly. 'I swear it.' 'He was very weak, and I could barely hear what he said, when his hot breath burned my ear. 'I am—the bank robber.' 'What?' I asked, dumbfounded. 'Yes, I've been tracked for two years, and I'm hounded until I was compelled to embrace the expedient.' 'What expedient?' I asked. 'The detectives knew me so well that I could not disguise myself, and I deliberately contracted smallpox, in order to get my face pitted and thus alter my looks. You know how well I have succeeded; my face is hideously pocked, and I might have had some rest from the detectives, but I am going to die here, and—' 'He was too much exhausted to speak further, and I bade him lie still and tell me more in the morning. On the morning he was sinking rapidly, and was hardly able to speak, but he described a spot near Astoria where he had buried $5000 a year previously, and asked me to accept it as a mark of his friendship. He died at noon, and two days later I went to Astoria and found the money, just as he had said I would. At first I did not know what to do with it, but finally concluded to keep it for my own use. I have never told the story before, but those who knew the determination of the man would not doubt the veracity of my statement. No! I will not tell you his name."—St. Louis Republic.

Washed Ashore.

ILLWACO, W. T., June 24th, 1882.
EDITOR ASTORIAN:
Will you announce the finding of another drowned fisherman upon the weather beach, about two miles north of Mr. L. A. Loomis' farm house. The body seemed to be that of a man 35 years of age and about six feet high, light complexion; wore a blue shirt, white cotton undershirt, blue cotton pants, No. 11 boots; had a Waltham watch, wooden pipe, and a little match-box. Further particulars may be had from Rees Williams, justice of the peace.

Made Him Laugh.

PORTLAND, OR., June 24 1882.
EDITOR ASTORIAN:
To-day when passing a milk ranch on the road to Hillsboro, I overheard a bearded male talking to a barefooted youngster: "So your father is working now? And can't he make preaching pay any more?" Whereupon I thought of the days of the apostles, and had to laugh.

New Rich Blood!

The use of Oregon Blood Purifier.
DeForce is building a "skiff" to transport the salmon heads to his factory at Menhaden. The dimensions are 57 feet over all, 12 feet breadth of beam, depth of hold—no given. She is the largest "skiff" in American waters and will be called the "Don."
Fireworks of the freshest make at Carl Adler's.
To properly enjoy yourself these pleasant afternoons, get a croquet set from Carl Adler, and invite your friends.

Damaged Wheat Cargoes.

In Boerbohn of May 26th, are the following mention of arrival of Columbia River cargoes:
Napier arrived May 24, load perfect; cargo having shifted, put into Valparaiso to trim. Jettisoned about 200 bags.
Lock Fergus same date, load perfect throughout.
Diana 22d, top tier bags forward and main hatch slightly mouldy but cool, otherwise all good.
Emma T. Crowell, 25th, load perfect throughout.
Stanton, same date, damaged in port wing estimated not to exceed 120 bags, otherwise good.
James A. Wright, 24th, top tier of bags under main hatch slightly mouldy but cool, otherwise good.
Peebleshire, 24 grain in top tier of bags at each hatch mouldy but cool; the captain reported about 20 tons rotted.
Algon Bay, arrived May 24d, her load perfect throughout.
Oluara, May 19th, about 100 bags under the main hatch slightly mouldy, otherwise good.
Heretofore, says the Reporter, it has been rather unusual thing for Columbia River cargoes to arrive in damaged condition, and from these reports the fact is shown that damage in almost every instance is caused by carelessness in battening down hatches and should teach a lesson for future profit. Shippers should make it a point to see that cargoes are perfectly secure, the decks are subject to being swept by ocean waves almost daily for months, and if the work of closing hatches properly be overlooked, nothing short of damaged cargoes need be expected.

CLIPPED AND CONDENSED.

General Anderson, says that the two ends of the Northern Pacific will meet in July, 1883.
There is a large number of rough characters in Portland at present. Where they came from is not known.
Missouri papers have already been called upon to return thanks for veterans laid upon the editorial table.
The woods of Clark county, W. T., are full of cattle and other stock driven out of the bottoms by the rise of the Columbia.
Machinery for the manufacture of yarn and socks is on the way to Eugene City, where a factory for that purpose is to be started.
Rheumatic Mr. Burke bathed himself in turpentine at Lyons, Ia., and then lighted his pipe for a comfortable smoke. He was burned to death.
A Washington special says: Guiteau takes his situation coolly. He still professes the belief that the President will come to his rescue at the last moment.
Grant county will sell 500,000 pounds of wool this year. This should bring something like $100,000, which is not a very bad showing for an industry that is just in its infancy.
A final splice of the Mexican cable has been made off Brazos Santiago, placing Galveston in direct communication with Vera Cruz, and telegraphic communication with the whole of South America.
A California jurymen who voted to convict a prisoner of violating the Sunday liquor law was arrested at the instance of the convicted man, and was fined fifty dollars for a similar offence. It is to be hoped that the great institution of trial by jury will not be destroyed in California by frequent resort to such summary retaliation.

Articles of incorporation were filed last Thursday with the Secretary of State, incorporating the Oregon Pioneer Association. Incorporators: Medorum Crawford, Joseph Watt, John Catlin and P. X. Mathieu. Principal office, Salem, Oregon. The object and pursuit of this incorporation shall be to collect from living witnesses and other sources such facts relating to the Pioneers and history of the territory of Oregon, as the association may deem worthy of preservation, and to promote social intercourse among its members.

The roadway is now closed by four fences, with space at the side of each fence for footmen.
The rumor that DeForce's 57 foot "skiff" is to run from O'Brien's hotel to upper town, is without foundation. We understand a balloon is in process of inflation.
